

Michael C. Henderson, president

BIOGRAPHY

Mike Henderson is President of Associated Builders and Contractors of Greater Baltimore. In his role, Mike is responsible for growth, policy development, government and industry relations and communications.

ABC represents more than 1600 firms in Maryland and is one of the largest business organizations in the State. Under his leadership, ABC Baltimore has grown to become the 5th largest chapter among the 75 located across the United States. Mike has created and managed strategic alliances with major industry groups, such as the American Institute of Architects and the Urban Land Institute. He has improved the association's profile through strategic media relations and developed Maryland's largest Workers' Compensation program. Under his leadership, the organization's revenue increased by 220 percent.

Mike is credited with helping create The Maryland Center for Construction Education and Innovation, an industry umbrella group that was established by the Governor's Workforce Investment Board in 2009 and is currently located at Towson University. In a previous administration, he served on Governor's Task Force to Improve Efficiency in Government.

Prior to coming to ABC Baltimore, Mike was ABC National's Director of Communications where he worked closely with the Washington media and was a frequent contributor to op-ed pages of some of the nation's leading newspapers.

A graduate of Towson University, where he studied Communications and Business, Mike also completed course work for a Masters Degree at the University of Baltimore. Active in local charitable organizations, Mike is the board president for Acts 4 Youth, a non-profit organization that mentors at-risk-boys in the Pen Lucy area of Baltimore City. Mike resides in Towson, with his wife and three children.
